On 12 October, the southern section of the North Camp quartered an artillery regiment from Bernburg, and the northern section an artill

4. On 12 October, the southern section of the North Camp quartered an artillery regiment from Bernburg, and the northern section an artillery regiment from Magdeburg. The two units had returned from maneuvers and were engaged in individual training only. The South Camp quartered a unit of about battalion strength, which consisted of personnel who wore red-bordered black epaulets. The unit was permanently stationed at the artillery range. (4)

5. The officers billets were only partly occupied by officers belonging to the units in the North Camp. The tent camp had been dismantled. Fuel from two tank cars was drained into barrels and moved to the South Camp on 15 and 16 October respectively. The personnel handling the barrels wore red-bordered black epaulets with artillery insignia. Telephone lines to the individual units, which had been strung during the summer, were removed. Prior to 19 October, trees in the Altengrabow area were cut and prepared to serve as telegraph poles. About 3,000 tree trunks were shipped away by rail. (5)

The convoy which drove toward the Altengrabow range belongs to an unidentified AT artillery brigade of the Second Gds Ncz Army. A column of the 3d Gds (?) AT Arty Brig. The white ribbons on the caps indicate that the troops participated in a field exercise. The artillery regiment from Bernburg is probably a regiment of the 3d Gds (?) AT Arty Brig, and that from Magdeburg probably a regiment of the 44th (?) Gun Arty Brig. It is believed that the two units will stay in the North Camp during the winter. The termination of training activity in the Altengrabow artillery range was previously indicated by reports on troop trains going from Altengrabow to the south.
